Wilton landowners welcome release of Interim Land Use and Infrastructure Implementation Plan

The three major landowners in the Wilton Priority Growth Area - Bradcorp, Governor's Hill and Walker Corp - today welcomed the NSW Government's release of the Interim Land Use and Infrastructure Implementation Plan for Wilton.

Independent coordinator representing the three landowners, Robert Bennett, said the release of the interim plan by the NSW Department of Planning and Environment was a crucial step in progressing plans for a new community in South West Sydney.

"The landowners have long maintained that Wilton New Town needs to be supported by significant investment in key infrastructure including public transport and roads, new schools, access to health services and plenty of jobs and we are pleased the NSW Government also shares this vision," Mr Bennett said.

"The release of the Interim Land Use and Infrastructure Implementation Plan for Wilton for public consultation is a major step forward following the declaration of Wilton New Town as a priority growth area in 2016.

"The landowners will now work through the detail of the interim plan and look forward to continuing their cooperative relationship with the NSW Government and Wollondilly Shire Council to make sure Wilton New Town will deliver on the vision promised as well as preserving the natural beauty of this region."

As part of a strong commitment to infrastructure, more than $500 million is to be invested into the new community.

"This will comprise $178 million for State infrastructure, including two new public primary schools, a new public K-12 school, a private K-12 school site, health services, major road upgrades, a public transport interchange, bus-only roads, local playing fields and a recreational lake," Mr Bennett said.

"In addition, around $350 million will be invested into local infrastructure including local roads and parks, community facilities, and a local aquatic centre."

The vision for Wilton New Town includes:
